Sri Veda Dharmashala (SVDS) was created to preserve and promote the teachings of Sanatana Dharma among future generations in the U.S. Our mission is to provide spiritual guidance, religious services, and resources to help families stay connected to dharmic traditions, fostering a sincere appreciation and practice of Hindu values across generations.

Veda Dharma refers to a system of righteous conduct and ethical behavior based on the Vedas, ancient sacred texts of Hinduism. It encompasses the moral and ethical order guiding human actions, duties, and spiritual practices, emphasizing righteousness and devotion. Vedic Dharma is a fundamental principle in Hinduism, influencing traditions and practices, of each and every Hindu.

Shala means a facility. Hence, a facility (Shala) which encourages all its devotees to follow Veda Dharma is named: Sri Veda Dharma Shala.

SVDS offers a full range of priest services aligned with Sanatana Dharma, including rituals like housewarmings (Grihapravesham), naming ceremonies (Namakarana), weddings, Shanti pujas, and Sathabhishekam celebrations. We also assist families during last rites, from cremation ceremonies to thirteenth-day rituals like Pitru Yagna and Anna Dana.

SVDS continues to operate a Sunday School dedicated to teaching children and young adults the principles, stories, and practices of Sanatana Dharma. Through classes, discussions, and cultural activities, we aim to build strong foundations so that future generations develop a sincere understanding and commitment to dharmic living.

CALENDAR EXPLANATION

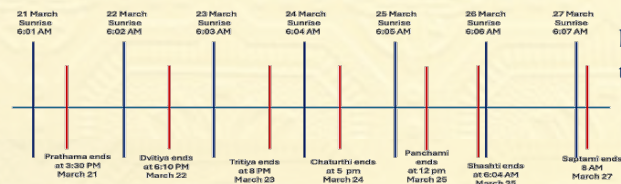

महाक्रषि वशिष्ठ॥ यस्मिन् पक्षे यत्र काले येन दृग्गणितैक्यम्। दृश्यते तेन पक्षेण कुर्यात्तिथ्यादिनिर्णयम्॥

A common misunderstanding is the assumption that the festival dates printed in Indian Panchangas automatically apply worldwide. This is incorrect. Indian Panchangas are calculated solely using India's local sunrise, sunset, moonrise, and moonset timings, and therefore their festival dates are valid only within India. These dates cannot be directly used for other countries.

Another widespread misconception is that countries such as the USA, Canada, or most of Europe—being behind India in time—should always celebrate festivals one day later. This is also false. Tithi, Nakshatra, Yoga, and Karana are astronomical events that begin and end at the same absolute moment across the globe. What differs is the local clock time at which that astronomical moment occurs..

After converting Tithi and Nakshatra ending times into the local timezone, festival rules must be applied using the local sunrise, sunset, and moonrise. Because these elements vary by location, a festival outside India may fall on: the same date as in India, one day before, or one day after, depending on how the Tithi aligns with the local Hindu day.

A Hindu day (Vaara) begins at sunrise, not at midnight. A Tithi does not change at midnight and is not fixed to 24 hours; it may last anywhere between 19 and 27 hours, depending on the relative motion of the Sun and Moon.

Every 12 degrees of angular separation between them constitutes one Tithi.

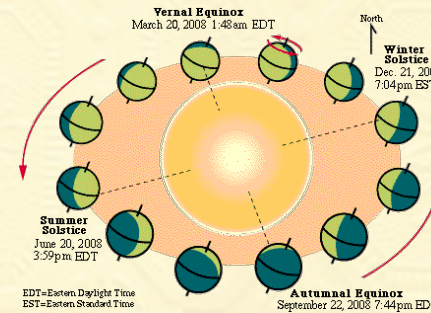

Because these are geocentric astronomical phenomena, Tithis and Nakshatras start and end simultaneously worldwide, but each region experiences these moments at its own local time. Indian Panchangas convert these times to IST. Other countries must convert the same astronomical moments from UTC into their respective local time zones before determining festival dates.

For example, on October 17, 2008, the Ashwayuja (Ashwin) Krishna Paksha Tritiya ends at 16:39:21 IST, after which Chaturthi begins. Seattle is 12 hours 30 minutes behind IST during daylight saving time, so converting the event to Seattle's local time requires subtracting 12 hours 30 minutes from the Indian ending time. This calculation—16:39:21 IST minus 12:30—yields 04:09:21 AM in Seattle. Thus, in Seattle, Tritiya prevails until 04:09:21 AM, and Chaturthi begins immediately thereafter. This demonstrates how the same astronomical event occurs simultaneously worldwide, yet each location experiences it according to its own local clock time, which is why festival dates differ from region to region.

How are festivals determined? Festivals are determined based on local astronomical conditions, as seen in the case of Sankashti Chaturthi, where Chaturthi Tithi must be present at the local moonrise. For example, if Tritiya ends at 19:32 IST, but Kolkata's moonrise is at 19:25, Kolkata experiences moonrise while Tritiya is still prevailing, so the festival moves to the next day. In contrast, New Delhi's moonrise is at 19:36, which occurs after Chaturthi has begun, meaning Delhi celebrates the festival on the same day. Thus, even within the same country, festival dates can differ depending on each city's local moonrise and Tithi alignment.

Uttarayana/Dakshinayana: The seasons are created by the Earth's 23.45° axial tilt as it orbits the Sun. When this tilt leans toward the Sun, we experience summer; when it leans away, we experience winter. Because of this tilt, the Sun appears to move north and south of the equator, creating the illusion of the Sun's northward (Uttarayana) and southward (Dakshinayana) motion. Uttarayana corresponds to the Sun's apparent northward movement beginning at the Winter Solstice, while Dakshinayana corresponds to the Sun's apparent southward movement beginning at the Summer Solstice. These motions produce the seasons, equinoxes, and solstices.

A common misconception is that Makara Samkranti marks the start of Uttarayana. This confusion arose because, thousands of years ago, the Sayana (tropical) zodiac and the Nirayana (sidereal) zodiac were aligned. Due to the precession of the equinoxes, the equinox shifts roughly 50 seconds each year, creating the Ayanamsha and causing Makara Samkranti to drift farther from the actual solstice. If one insists that Makara Samkranti is Uttarayana, then over the next 9,000 years its date would drift all the way into June, which clearly contradicts astronomical reality. All Drishya Ganitha Panchangams—including mypanchang, Rastriya Panchang, and Janmabhumi Panchang—correctly use the tropical Sun's position to define Uttarayana and Dakshinayana. Therefore, January 14th is not Uttarayana; the true Uttarayana occurs every year on December 21st or 22nd. The same principle applies to Ritus, which are always determined by the tropical Sun's position—not by the sidereal zodiac.

Balaji Mandir

DEAR ALL!

SVDS has acquired 2 acres of land and a church building in the beautiful hills of Carpentersville to establish a Vedic Center and Balaji Mandir. This sacred space will preserve our culture and traditions for future generations. We seek the Chicago community's generous support—through donations and volunteer service—to bring this vision to life. All contributions are tax-deductible. Please explore sponsorship opportunities and the benefits of your contributions.
